The pilot is targeted at communities shown to have the greatest need as measured by child outcomes including infant mortality, kindergarten readiness, and Third Grade Reading Guarantee Scores. Miami Valley Child Development Centers, Inc., a nonprofit entity, is managing a series of four resource fairs through March 8. Qualifying parents affiliated with MVCDC, YMCA, Springfield City Schools, and local partners are encouraged to take advantage of free resources at each event.

At the first event on January 26, 84 attendees received blankets, books with an at home curriculum, hats, mittens, food gift baskets, and discount store gift cards. Families also were able align additional assistance with partnering community agencies.

MVCDC anticipates over 150 parents at its upcoming second event:

According to Mary Burns, MVCDC president, "ODE approached a handful of early childhood education providers late 2016 to secure interest in $50,000 grants. We jumped on the opportunity to help deserving Springfield parents, which is part of our five county service area. Research data reflect over a 30% child poverty rate while the State of Ohio is 16%."
